

The Project Medimare: Mediation in Maritime Disputes is continuing at good pace. New scholarship holders and collaborators have joined the project and will help develop its forthcoming outputs, mainly the Online Course on Maritime Mediation, soon to be prepared.

PARTICIPATION IN THE UN OCEAN CONFERENCE

The blue growth program was represented at the UN Ocean Conference that took place in Lisbon. The Medimare project presented a video, that showcased the need for maritime mediation and the major outcomes expected from the project. To watch the video, follow the link <https://medimare.eu/about-the-project/>

MediMARE - Mediation in Maritime Affairs

Mediation is a relevant alternative dispute resolution mechanism that has gained international and national attention over the past decades, given its ability to solve highly technical disputes and other conflicts that do not find in Courts and or Arbitration a proper or adequate seat for resolution.

Mediation finds in the maritime area a particularly rich field for development, but that is still underexplored. The purpose of this project is to unlock the potential of mediation in maritime issues, in order to promote an equitable and safety culture for all involved. Indeed, mediation needs to be better known and most widely used in order for its positive traits to embed the "world at Sea".

Taxonomy of Maritime Disputes

The central output of the project “A taxonomy of maritime disputes as a foundation for mediation” is complete and available at <https://medimare.eu/outcomes/>. Take a look and tell us what your thoughts on the proposed taxonomy are. Interactions to medimare@uc.pt

Interview Guide on Maritime Mediation

Presently the Project Team, with close collaboration from Jon Ivar Håvold, is developing an INTERVIEW GUIDE ON MARITIME MEDIATION to be submitted to relevant maritime actors. This will allow the involvement of stakeholders and end-users to the project from the beginning on.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Follow the project at:

medimare.eu